

Waiting in Line

FamilyCare aims to provide fair and equitable access to its services.

To receive services, you must meet the individual program's eligibility criteria. For further information ask our intake worker, read our program brochures or access FamilyCare's website.

If you don't get a service straight away, we will inform you that you will be put on an active holding list. Active holding means that we will contact you regularly to check on your situation. If things change, please call us immediately. You may also be put in contact with other services that may be able to support you whilst waiting to be allocated a FamilyCare worker.

Requests for service are accepted and allocated according to need. When demand is high we have to prioritise who gets what service when.

Priority is assessed based on the safety and wellbeing of your child and family, taking into account:

- How well your family is supported;
- Seriousness and type of issues affecting your family;
- Number of issues facing your family.

We will always consider your rights and they are set out in FamilyCare's Rights and Responsibilities Charter.
